About the Workshop:

Research for Resurgence Foundation (RFRF) is organizing a two-day workshop on "ACADEMIC WRITING: DELINEATING THEORY AND PRAXIS" on 23-24 August, 2019. This academic exercise is an attempt to invigorate important aspects pertaining to the culture of academic writing. It also aims to contribute towards capacity building among young faculty members and doctoral candidates in mapping and theorizing the fundamental principles associated with scholarly writing. Along with this, it seeks to strengthen the research culture and promote interdisciplinary aspects of social sciences and humanities.

Objectives of the Workshop:

- Understanding the newer paradigms of academic writing within the corridors of Humanities and Social Sciences Research
- Building the culture of academic writing and rescuing it from simplistic formulations
- Intertwining the emerging disciplines within the universe of Humanities and Social Science Research
- Develop an appreciation within the facets of academic writing
- Develop critical faculty in understanding the requirements for publication
- Conceptualizing research as a tool to sensitize the society with thoughtful arguments
- Introspection to the modalities of collaboration among interdisciplinary segments.
